

ABSTRACT

The present invention provides methods and apparatus, including computer program products, for debugging a computer program running on a system that is separated from the debugging system by at least one firewall. The computer program being debugged can be a Java application. A router on each side of the firewall can be used to establish communication between the two systems. To the debugging system, it appears that the computer program is running locally.

50127811.2.doc